Peterson host to shadows

By Christie Bond

21st Space Wing Public Affairs

More than 80 students from Panorama Middle School got a taste of life in the military Tuesday.

They were here for the Junior Achievement Job Shadow Day, a program that pairs eighth-grade students with volunteers in professional workplaces for a day of learning and mentoring.

The students spent 3.5 hours here shadowing their hosts in a variety of workplaces, including Civil Engineering, the Area Dental Lab and Security Forces. The intent of the experience was for the students to see what is expected of employees in professional work settings and to gain an appreciation of the importance of high school classes and grades beyond graduation. It also gave them an understanding of the career opportunities available in the military.

"I feel this program is very important for future recruitment for the Air Force, and it gives young kids a vision and a goal to shoot for," said Master Sgt. John Foskey, 84th Airlift Flight C-21A quality assurance representative. "I stress to the kids that good grades and every-day decisions they make will have a direct outcome on their future"

"Job Shadow Day is an opportunity for the students to see what people do in the real world," said Jennifer Barggren, an eighth-grade math teacher at Panorama Middle School and trip chaperone. "It's so encouraging to us, the teachers, to see our students excited about the military. We want our students to make the most of the talents they have and hope the shadow day gives them a vision of what their future could be."

Jill Johnson, a student who took part in the shadowing program, saw the day as an opportunity to expand her horizons.

Staff Sgt. Mario Gonzalez, a Peterson firefighter, helps Alecia Romp, an eighth grader from Panorama Middle School, put on fire protection equipment as part of Job Shadow Day.

"I thought it was really cool to go out to different job sites and to let us look at what is out there," she said. "It really helps us think of opportunities."

The Peterson site visit was one part of a larger Job Shadow Day program. About 3,000 students from School Districts Two and 11 visited more than 80 businesses and other employers in the local area on Job Shadow Day.

AFSPC commander demands action after weekend deaths

PETERSON AIR FORCE BASE, Colo. — Two Air Force Space Command members are dead from what appear to be alcohol-related injuries last weekend.

Airman 1st Class Timothy McIntyre, with the 790th Security Forces Squadron at F.E. Warren Air Force Base, Wyo., was killed after a vehicle accident April 27.

Airman 1st Class Krystal Thomas, of the 91st Maintenance Squadron at Minot AFB, N.D., died April 28 from injuries after falling through a plate glass window.

AFSPC Safety Directorate reported that this double tragedy brings the tally up to three airmen dead this fiscal year from alcohol-related accidents. The earlier death was from an automobile rollover.

The reaction from the incidents this weekend has been swift from the AFSPC commander and vice commander.

"This is a blow, not only for the families of these two young people, but for all of us in their Air Force family as well. We all feel the loss and must do all we can to learn from these most recent tragedies. The facts are clear to me: We are not doing all we can to prevent alcohol-related accients," said Gen. Lance Lord, commander of AFSPC. "I can't and won't accept this. The stakes are too high."

He ordered commanders from the squadron up throughout AFSPC do an "eyeball-to-eyeball" with everyone on station by no later than April 30. Their orders were clear – emphasize the risks of drinking. Those off-station – on leave, deployed and on temporary duty – had to be contacted by phone no later than May 2 with the same message.

"I was personally saddened by the tragic deaths of two of our airmen," said Lt. Gen. Robert Hinson, AFSPC vice commander. "It's all the more tragic because these are young people who lost their lives unnecessarily — young people whose lives were entrusted to us by their families.

Wear uniform with pride

On a recent trip to F.E. Warren AFB to attend an official military function, four Air Force Chief Master Sergeants stopped at an out-of-the-way restaurant to eat lunch. The fellow chiefs were traveling in their military uniform. Upon completing their meal they called the waiter over to settle up with the bill. They were taken by surprise when they learned that an unidentified customer had already stepped up and paid for the meals. The chiefs, not wanting to take advantage of the situation, then pressed the waiter for the name of this most generous customer. All the waiter would say is that the customer asked not to be identified and to thank the four airmen for all they do in serving our great nation.

GSU At a Glance

Unit: 2nd Space Warning Squadron Location: Buckley Air Force Base, Colo. Mission: In terms of space-based missile warning, the 2nd Space Warning Squadron represents the convergence of both past and future.

With more than 30 years of excellence in the Defense Support Program, the squadron launched the nation's newest line of defense, the Space-Based Infrared System on Dec. 17, 2001.

The Squadron's current mission is to maintain satellite control authority for the DSP satellite constellation and report ballistic missile/space launches, nuclear detonations and infrared data of intelligence value to unified commands, Joint Chiefs of Staff and the President and Secretary of Defense.

Moreover, the squadron is the 21st Space Wing's largest ground station for DSP operations.

As a space-based infrared surveillance system, DSP uses satellites operating in geosynchronous equatorial orbit more than 22,000 miles above the earth. The system was designed to detect intercontinental ballistic missiles, space launches and nuclear detonations in near-real time.

Volunteer recognition luncheon highlights Peterson volunteers

Tech. Sgt. Michael Phillips 21st Space Wing Public Affairs

In recognition of Volunteer Recognition Week April 21-27, more than 250 people attended a luncheon Tuesday at the enlisted club to salute Peterson's volunteers

KOAA TV news anchor Lisa Lyden was the mistress of ceremonies for the luncheon.

"Many programs, such as the Thrift Shop, Family Services, the museum and the Retiree Activities Office, would cease to operate without volunteers," said Jim Reynolds, Peterson Volunteer Program Manager at the Family Support Center. "Many others, like the base clinic, Services,

Accounting and Finance, Family Support, Legal, Canadian Forces Support Unit and the 302nd Family Support Group, would see their level of service suffer greatly.'

In the past year, more than 600 volunteers worked more than 75,000 hours. "The Points of Light Foundation, a national volunteer organization, estimates the volunteer hourly 'pay' at $15.39 per hour," said Reynolds. "That translates to $1,154,250 in services provided by Peterson Air Force Base vol-

Defense Commissary Agency

May is Commissary Awareness Month and the commissary is ready to serve the needs of military members.

"That's our most important mission," says Defense Commissary Agency director Maj. Gen. Robert J. Courter Jr. "Commissaries are an essential part of the worldwide military community, and that's just one of the messages we want to deliver to our service members during Commissary Awareness Month in May."

Actually, every month is Commissary Awareness Month at DeCA. Courter believes.

"Commissaries are a military benefit offering grocery savings of more than 30 percent," says Courter. "Store directors have been working to share the information with the entire military community, from single service members to families, retirees, to active duty. and Guard and reserve too

'We also want to communicate the message that we are a part of readiness - a core element of military family support," says Courter. "We enable military families to be assigned worldwide with active duty members, and we impact quality of life, retention and a sense of community.

"Consistent delivery of U.S. grocery products and great prices worldwide are what we are all about.'

Commissaries continue to be a focal point of the military community in 2002, just as they have been for more than 135 years, and the biannual Commissary Customer Satisfaction Survey rates customer satisfaction higher than ever. DeCA is celebrating its 10th year of existence as an agency, but it's still changing, evolving, and striving for improvements.

"Yes, we have a long tradition behind us, but we haven't stopped seeking a higher standard," says Courter. "Our stores now offer the freshest produce at great prices, unbeatable deals on fresh meats, and we've developed the Best Value Item and Manager's Specials programs to offer even lower prices. We've also streamlined our operations to control costs, while increasing savings and improving cus-

DeCA will also announce recipients of the 2002 scholarships for military children in May.

"The scholarship program is just one more way we have become more essential in the lives of military families," says Courter. "Nearly 400 scholarships were awarded in 2001 and that number will grow this year."

"We must take responsibility for the welfare of our fellow airmen. Leaders at every level, from general to airman need to get personally involved in the welfare of all the troops. Make no mistake, we don't intend to lose any more people because of alcohol.

In addition, AFSPC has decided to kick off the annual "101 Critical Days of Summer" campaign early this year. The campaign, which began Wednesday instead of the traditional Memorial Day, emphasizes not only driving safety but also recreational and sports safety

'We're serious about safety and we'll do whatever has to be done to get that message across, off-duty as well as on-duty," Hinson said.

The legal ramifications can be severe as well. According to the AFSPC Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, there have been 16 Articles 15 UCMJ non-judicial punishment actions imposed this calendar year for drunk driving.

But the ultimate aim, according to David Zipf, chief of AFSPC Ground Safety Division, is not to punish but to prevent.

"Our marching orders are to prevent these kinds of accidents from happening. It's called mishap prevention, which is what the 101 Critical Days is all about," he said. "Our aim is to give our people every bit of information they may possibly need. Leadership and education are the roots of safety. We do this with training, campaigns, the Web – anything we can use. It's a team effort with unit safety representatives and the commanders. We believe that commanders play a critical role of any safety campaign. If the commander shows he takes it seriously, the troops will take it seriously."

ARSPACE gets new home

Army Space Command building nears completion vital, key role in

By Capt. Laura Kenney

PETERSON AFB. Colo. - In the words of Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Cosumano Jr., "Space capabilities are critical to the ground warfighter, and integral to the warfighting capabilities of the total force.'

Cosumano, Commanding General of Space and Missile Defense Command/Army Space Command, spoke at a luncheon for space industry executives and the soldiers and civilians of Army Space, stressing the importance of space in the transitioning world of post-9/11.

The general emphasized that the Army has always played a key role in Space, and that the joint nature of current operations is the wave of the future.

"The U.S. Army understands the value of Space, and its value in the warfight," he said. "We are developing a professional Space Cadre - personnel trained in the basics of Space - and have created a functional area for soldiers to specialize in. In a not too distant future, every soldier will have access to satellite communications. An integrated Missile Defense System will make ground-based midcourse defense a reality, a capability required by the horror of 9/11.

"Make no mistake, that date clarified the country's thinking,' Cosumano said. "More specifically, the Army has a vital, key role in Space as part of the total warfight."

Construction of the Army Space building, scheduled to be completed and occupied in the fall of 2002, began with a groundbreaking ceremony in July 2000. The project and dream of an integrated complex, which included the key players of U.S. Space Command. North American Aerospace Defense Command and Air Force Space Command, was conceptualized in the spring of 1997.

"The new building is one tangible symbol of our investment in Space, and our dedication to joint effort," Cosumano said. "This permanent residence is indicative of our commitment "

From an exterior view, the buildings appear almost complete.

"This project has undergone many significant changes throughout its history," said Hugh W. Mason, Director of Public Works for U.S. Army Space Command. "I am truly excited seeing the building come to completion - and moving all of the headquarters elements into one facility located next to the NORAD/USSPACE and improve coordination with the Space Command Staff as we execute our mission as the Army Service Component command to U.S. Space Command.

"Establishing this permanent headquarters highlights the Army's commitment to providing relevant Space products, analysis, and integration to the warfighter."

A critical Army building being put up on Air Force property might raise a few eyebrows, but Cosumano put any such thoughts to rest:

"The Colorado Springs area is a military community probably unlike any other community because you have such diversity of services. Although Air Force predominates, we have a large Army contingency with a division here -- the Air Force Academy, Peterson Air Force Base, Schriever Air Force Base, and then a unified command.

"I can't think of another place in the United States where you have such a thing. The message to the other commanders in the neighborhood is that we are going to continue to be

End of a Legacy... Beginning of an Era

Capt. Burton Catledge 2nd Space Warning Squadron

BUCKLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Colo. -- The 2nd Space Warning Squadron recently certified the last member of the unit on the Legacy ground station.

The 2nd SWS has the distinction of operating two distinct weapons systems. One half of the squadron comprises the Space-based Infrared weapons system while the other half consists of the CONUS Ground Station or Legacy.

With the operationalization of SBIRS, the deactivation of Legacy has begun. On April 23, the last member of the Legacy team was certified. Staff Sgt. Jennifer Algiere was certified as a Data System Supervisor/Operator following a "highly qualified" rating on her initial evaluation.

"I'm glad I've had the opportunity to operate both weapons systems, and I'm sure that my experience with Legacy will be invaluable when I begin the transition to SBIRS," said Algiere.

Although the weapons system and people are changing, the unit's mission has remained the same for 30 years; "Provide continuous and reliable space-based warning of attack against North America, and U.S. and Allied forces worldwide.'
